Yesterday several merchants in this city received despatches from Calcutta of five days later date than the letters above referred to, say August 27 From their brief intimatiom it appears that the market had continued to get worse. A large native failure had occurred in the Bazaar; business was at a stand, and prices were nominal. We learn that, since the panic of 1857, there has sprung up a new class of native buyers, who are purely speculators. They have been the boldest givers of orders for goods and yarns to arrive; and, of late, the arrivals have come upon them overwhelmingly, partly in vessels which made short passages, and partly in others which were much behind their time . Under such circumstances, necessity or alarm has led to forced sales. It is evident, however, that the market is glutted for the present, and that the districts connected with it are full enough. Some of the letters express a good deal of uneasiness as to what failures may arise out of the present and prospective state of things. It is, however, to be observed that, as the sales of our products are nearly all guaranteed in their payment by the Banians, who are a rich class of something like bankers, there is little need of apprehension about bad debts to our merchants .--There is another cause of (temporary) depression; extraordinary quantities of sea-damaged yarns and goods have come into port, and these have had to be sold by auction for whatever they might bring. The above advices have operated injuriously upon this day's market. The somewhat increased demand for goods on Eastern account which showed itself last week is stopped; at any rate, such offers as are made to producers appear to be mere feelers. For yarns adapted to that quarter, there may be said to be no inquiry.

The same cause increases the caution of other classes of buyers. But the trade in goods for various foreign markets and for home consumption is so good that no effect is produced upon prices. The home buyers of yarns have held back from business to-day more markedly than they did last week. The same statement holds good of the continental buyers .-100 PIECES DUNBAR, DIXON & Co.'s LINEAS received Their accounts from the Leipsic fair are, indeed, very satisfactory as regards many textile fabrics into some of which cotton yarns enter, as, for instance, semi-woollen SHAWLS AND CLOAKS.

Cloths, the warps of which are various counts of twofold. It is certain, also, that the supply of yarn is very bare on that side. Yet the orders that come over are most meagre. When the purchases of yarn come on at Leipsic (at the latter end of the fair) we shall have some indication as to the feeling in that department. Too much importance may, however, be attached to fairs now-a-days: they afford only signs of the general state of things.

The result of the above-named influences upon prices may be thus stated: In water twist of all numbers, This department of our stock is more attractive than usual. | whether in warps or bundles, and in mule twist and their NEW MARBLE ESTABLISHMENT, a visit on very rich FRENCH and SCOTCH EMBROIDERIES, at west below 50's, the buyers can supply themselves more cheaply by 1ad. to 1ad. per lb. than they could have done this day week; not from all spinners, but from one or another. In goods specially prepared for the East, a small concession would not induce business. Cloths which have been in request for other foreign markets, 1,000 Pieces BONNET RIBBONS, bought at a sacrifice, and for home consumption, seem to have a little less of stiffness in their prices; but that is all, and even that is not perceptible in every kind.

Single yarns above 50's, and twofolds in general do not lie within the range of the deteriorating influences. The former, therefore, remain firm, many of them still hardening in value. The latter are steady in the lower counts, and inclining upward in the finer ones. We are very willing once more to draw attention to the subject of complaint in the following letter from a

These facts require no comment from us. Such list, however, is not given; and we were told by the SUPPLY OF THE ABOVE GUANO just received, and highly respectable correspondent just referred to, that he had in vain demanded one. On all hands we hear also that the brokers employed by spinners cannot be got to stand up for the rights of their principals in this matter. It is surprising that this should be so. An agent must find his interest in doing the best he can for his principals, and in being zealous to do so; we should at least presume as much, except in the case (not an uncommon one) in which he endeavors to serve two hostile masters by standing in the anomaand at trifling expense.
